FROM THE DIRECTOR
So we have celebrated the 500th anniversary of the beginning of the Reformation, and now it’s over. But I’m not ready to let go of the topic yet, and neither should you be. What does the Reformation mean to you? To me it is about being bold in your faith by finding out what you believe, why you believe it, and opening up dialogue about your faith with others. That’s all that Martin Luther did, and look what it started. But that takes effort. Too often we just want to be left alone to coast in our Christian faith and not have to put forth that much effort. May I suggest that Jesus never was, nor is He now interested in casual relationships. If He was, He would not have been crucified, because He would not have demanded such extreme faith from his disciples to take up their cross daily. How much of your life are you willing to give to Jesus? If you say “all” and then don’t put the effort into growing in your knowledge of the truth, you are being intellectually dishonest with yourself. Jesus wants all of you—heart, mind, soul, and strength (body). To develop a heart for the Lord, you go to times of worship. To develop your strength, you go to a workout facility. The library has resources to help you feed your soul and develop your mind. Come and let us help you find the ones that will exercise your spiritual muscles! — Dr. Fitsimmons
